Viking Owner Guarantees Comfort With WESMAR Cruising Package

Unruly seas have a tendency to ruin a vacation. Trips that feature constant seasickness and tipping furniture make planning for future yachting excursions with suffering family members problematic at best.

Fortunately, Neil Hochman, the President of Anchor Marine in Jupiter, Florida, has found a solution for troublesome seas when relaxation is the ultimate goal: a WESMAR Electronic Gyro Roll Fin Stabilizer.

"The system responds beautifully. We leave it on at twenty-seven knots with no trouble."

Hochman began to believe in the performance of WESMAR while acquainting himself with the system as the owner of Anchor Marine, a company that purchases used vessels and refurbishes them for specialized uses. His interest in WESMAR Stabilizers continued to increase while spending time on his own yacht and feeling the wrath of family members disinterested in taking journeys on the open seas. Serving as a busy consultant in the marine business added more pressure because Hochman has little time available for relaxation. He wanted available time to be quality time on the water.

So Hochman installed a WESMAR RS400 on his 54' Viking and now comfort is the norm. The results have been spectacular. He can guarantee a smooth ride even when turbulent seas are on the horizon.

"This stabilizer has been on this boat for just over a year and I cannot believe the performance. I have taken the boat to and from New York (Hochman's vessel is docked in Jupiter, Florida) in five and six-foot seas and I have never experienced any discomfort. Our schedule is never altered and nobody complains. We even travel at normal cruising speeds."

How do the WESMAR fins respond to higher speeds?

"The system responds beautifully. We leave it on at twenty-seven knots with no trouble."

"On the way to our group cruise in February 1998, I had the only wife who wasn't complaining. We were perfectly comfortable in six-foot seas. After hearing the frustrations of my colleagues at the event, I realized what a smart investment the stabilizer has been."

With the addition of their WESMAR, the Hochman's are one family that will not let turbulent seas ruin their plans.
